Zorbit's Math Adventure, a game-based learning program

St. John's-based Clockwork Fox Studios, an educational technology start-up, is transforming the way kids experience and learn math. Through a platform, driven by their Zorbit video game and adaptive learning technology, Zorbit immerses students in a rich world of engaging math problem-solving. It has been proven to help students to develop a conceptual understanding of key math skills, while building a positive attitude towards math. The Newfoundland and Labrador English School District recently added Zorbit to its approved list of resources for its schools across the province for their K-3 students.

BDC launches digital assessment tool

The Business Development Bank of Canada (BDC) recently published a new study that reveals the dramatic impact digital transformation can have on sales growth. Based on a survey of 2,000 Canadian entrepreneurs, the study finds that only 19% of businesses have strongly adopted digital technology and culture, whereas 57% have weak digital maturity. How to Make the Digital Shift in Your Business, demonstrates that businesses need to embrace new technologies or risk falling behind in an increasingly connected, automated and data-driven world. BDC has also debut a free online digital maturity assessment that allows businesses to measure their use of digital technologies, compare themselves against other companies and get valuable advice on areas of improvement. Once you get your results, you can download a detailed, printable report containing recommended readings and information on best practices.

Venture for Canada accepting applications for 2019 Fellowship Program

The Venture for Canada Fellowship Program is a two year fellowship for recent graduates looking to develop entrepreneurial skills, join a diverse and supportive community and gain work experience in startups across Canada. The Program helps recent graduates bridge the gap between post-secondary education and the startup ecosystem within a diverse and supportive community. Applicants must graduate(d) between Fall 2017 and Spring 2019, be eligible to work in Canada, be available to begin full time employment as of June 2019 and to attend a four week training camp in mid-May to mid-June.
